Water-methanol mixtures are a new class of organic fuels that are very promising as replacements for fossil fuels. This study focuses on the effects of a protic solvent on the dielectric response of a cellulose-based dielectric material. The dielectric constant of a pure methanol- and pure water-based medium shows good agreement with the literature. At lower mole fractions of methanol, the dielectric constant of the medium decreases, indicating the dominance of dielectric relaxation 82157476af
